ORIGINAL POETRY.

SICKNESS OF THE SOUL. When'er I see a hypocrite, Professing love to God and man, And view him read the holy writ, The truths of charity to scan, Then view him shun the needy poor, Nor with the sorrowful condole, 1 set a black mark on his door, And call it palsy of the soul

When'er I view a man of sense . Peruse the Scriptures to deny The truths of blest omnipotence And call the holy book a lie-Such noble doctrines to unroll, And not believe the sacred truth It must be droppy of the soul.

lutes,

When'er I view or young or old, A man devoted to himself, And make a god of paltry gold, And boast his greatness in his pelf-I say that man's corrupt in heart, His principles cannot be whole, Where dwells the plethora of soul.

The bliss which woman's charms inspire And feel sweet rapture thro' him steal, When glancing at her eye of fire, And I'll ensure that he's an ape, As blind as subterranean mole, A'mere baboon in human shape, With pale consumption in his soul MILFORD BARD.

Scareely in the years of prime, We've often wep: the wrecks of time, What tragic tears below the eye, What deaths we suffer, ere we die What broken friendships we deplore, ke.

The star of hope—the light of joy, Too oft by gloomy clouds are shaded, And fancy's dream, when cares destroy, How soon we see its lustre faded.

And fife are all our pleasures here, For so has cold experience prov'd them, and deep the sigh, and and the tear, Regret must know for having lov'd them. And friendship too, the poet's theme,

To smooth our path of life 'tis given, The young enthusiast's raptur'd dream, How oft distrust its bonds have riven. I will not say that friends deceive.

Nor call professions " false and hollow," Nor friendship, can I yet believe, A gleam which none but fools will follow.

But this, alas ' I've ever found, That storms are o'er it blowing, That darkest clouds will hover round, Where sunny skies were glowing.

But where are they who have not sigh'd Alone o'er friendships blighted, O'er glowing hopes that early died, And joys that once delighted

Then what are all these visions werth, If all we fondly cherish, To cheer us on a dark some earth, Are fated thus to perish. Princeton, Dec. 1st. SYLVIA.

TO -And eanst thou, dost thou ask me why One half the fickle world deny There being pleasure in it; The thing is plain, let reason tell, The very cause we should repel, Our actions seem to name it

The world and all its worth remain, These charms which in its compass reign, We view, sweet friend, in jeulous pride, Because those wishes are denied, Ambition showers o'er us.

Our hearts by grasping fancy taught, Are all with various failings fraught, And sure you will maintain it. And when some object meets the eye, Our eager views cannot get nigh, We're grieved not to obtain if

For strange it is, we seldom find, As thro' this transient vale we wind, By fair investigation, Those who, by cheerful actions give, A proof their minds contented live, In their allotted station.

Some seek for bliss in gaudy show, In passion's pomp, or circles low, Just as their fancies bend them ; And while they join the guldy throng, Imagine pleasures there belong,

That will from cares defend them And yet perchance too late they view, They would a plantom form pursue, For joys are them denied here; That virtuous din they fain would greet, Comake their moments glide more sweet, Did never yet preside there.

Some seck for bliss in raving o'er The ocean's wide, or climes explore, As may their views commend it; home seek in wealth the glitt'ring store, Are wounded if to heap it more, Mild fortune dont intend it.

Some seek for bliss in valour's round, Where war her burnish'd clarions sound, While crimson steps they trend in, And then if honours are denied, hey frown that fate should thus decide, The cause they would have bled in Thus that where oft our fancy clings Some certain disappointment brings, Too seldom we're contented ad objects that we most pursue, Tie destin'd mortals often rue, To meet them they consented

And thus we find 'tis grasping views, That o'er the wayward mind diffuse,

When cares we constant meet here , What to their lot kind heaven bath sent, Our joy might be replete here.

But envy with her jealous eye, While proud ambition marks her nigh, We find too often near us,

And prompts the mind in vain to erave, Those things we are not doom'd to have, As if, sweet friend, to theer us. Yet what is pomp or outward form,

That feast the eye the feelings charm, Delusive we have found them, For those who have the most and best. Must sink alike to kindred dust, From pleasures that surround them.

Then give me still my humble dome. Tho' rude I ask no other borne, While friends are sweetly round me; Nor envy none where'er I rove, Content within the sphere I move With which stern fate hath crown'd me ELLEN.

In all complicated cases of Scrofula and Syphilis, and where the Syphilitic Virus of the parent causes a development of Secrofula in the child, this is the only remedy upon which a single hope of recovery can be reasonably founded; there has been not instance of its failure, when properly used. It imparts vigour to the whole system while the cure is going on—are operation to long lasted for its ratin by the medical swelf g at the earns time the patient is enabled to take nourishing food, which under the common modes of practice, is usually withheld from the sufferer. In many instances where the horrible ravages of underation had haid bore figurent and isome, and where, to all appearance in channel nears but amputation could have saved live, in cases externe as even here does listed, have patients been snatched from the grave and restored to good health, and the devouring disease completely endicated.
